

How lucky we are to have found Music for Autism and John Lubbock, their tireless leader. Music played at such a high level shouldn't be reserved for just a few as it can have such a dramatic impact on so many of our students.

We feel so blessed here at Sherbourne Fields to have them visit our school on a regular basis. The children here all react at different levels and in different ways, but they all react, and often with a spontaneous and heartfelt connection to the sounds that surround them.

In small groups they literally have the opportunity to be surrounded by the musicians, and it is such a joy to hear and see their giggles, their smiles, their silences, their attention, their wild dancing, their transportation to a different place.

We have just had a visit and we are all waiting for their next one.....bring it on!

"I conducted at the front...it was really fun and all the orchestra followed me. You can really hear the instruments properly when you go to the front" – A.B - Student

"It was magical to see the students actually feeling the music. I have never seen such a reaction from my younger students."

Ann Jackson - Teacher
